

Abraham Hicks Daily Prayer

You are leading edge creators, on the leading edge of thought and the appreciation, the love, the knowing, that source feels for you is truly beyond physical, verbal description or comprehension.

We don't expect you to feel what we feel for you coming through your ears or through your brain. We want you to feel it through your cells, through your skin, through your emotions, through your solar plexus, through your body. We want you to feel us rippling with pleasure in acknowledgment of the perfection, evolving perfection, that is you.

There is nothing that we want you to do that you are not doing. But it is our powerful desire that you find a way of loving yourself more today than yesterday and more tomorrow than today.

We want you to acknowledge who you are and make peace with where you are, because there is no comparison that is valid other than your relationship with your own, new ideas.

Love others in their uniqueness and try to manage them not at all. And love yourself in your uniqueness and try to conform not at all. And as you move through your day-to-day experience let the prayer on your lips be:

I want to know the fullness of who I am So guide me closer in every step today To a fuller recognition of what I've been asking for And who I really am.

You are magnificent in your differences and there is great love here for you.
